Dear Mr Savage,

Thank you for your email regarding the communication that occurred on Monday 3rd June with myself and thank you for the apology.

I feel that it is important to address some of the points raised in your email.

We pride ourselves on the relationships that we build with parents and children, and it is never our intention to cause distress.

It is important that all parents adhere to our timings as we are unable to look after children before or after school. We do, however, offer full wraparound care should parents require it.

While I can understand that tensions may have been running high, as it was our first day back from the half term break, I must remind you that all communication must remain respectful and purposeful.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you wish to discuss this in further detail.

Yours sincerely,
